

Frank Surten is the CIA's deputy director in charge of bioterrorism countermeasures. Advances in biological research and the dissemination of the old Soviet bioweapons arsenal have made his job infinitely more difficult. Biological weapons from Soviet stockpiles have fallen into evil hands. Terrorist organizations have infiltrated U.S. laboratories to access and deploy the most pathogenic agents. The CIA must prevent a full blown disaster from unfolding. On the other side is Surtens long-time nemesis, Zoltan Bolto, an ex-Soviet engineer who has profited from bioweapons sales for years. It's a global game of cat and mouse to see who will win, and who will fall. But the CIA is not alone. Collaborating with the top bioweapons unit at the Army's heralded Fort Detrick, they have a fighting chance. Led by the head-strong General Alonzo Ducati, Fort Detrick's team of elite scientists has long produced potent bioweapons. Ducati has teamed his most promising scientist, Alec Altire, with the CIA's Pella Roshtal to take down the bioterrorists. With access to Anthrax, Ebola, Swine Flu and myriad other agents, time is of the essence. Deletion blends real science with elite scientists, spies, terrorists, profiteers and global governments to tell the gripping story of biological weapons in the post-9/11 world. Filled with diverse characters, a bait and switch game unfolds with deadly pathogens. No one is safe.
