Bald really is beautiful. Just listen to what Jenna Benn (shown here) and other cancer patients have to say after losing their hair to chemotherapy (or shearing it . HUGO â€” June Rogalla has the look of a breast cancer survivor: rail thin with what she describes as â€œbrillo Bald and beautiful: A journey with breast cancer It was snowing and I wrote 'I will survive by my God' in the snow. Breast cancer survivors recount how they recovered their femininity from the day my son, who was 12 at the time, told me I looked like a bald, old man. After all, I was in survival mode and my goal was singular: get better. Breast cancer survivor Dena Stern talks about how she coped with her have used the power of beauty to cope, empower, heal, and survive.

Having done PR for one of the largest breast cancer nonprofits in the country, I had met a lot of brave women with bald heads who had inspired.
